Brightening Southern Prospects.

It has been already mentioned that in reply to inquiries whether his office contains any evidence of Ku-Klux disturbances, Attorney General Pierpont replied; "There are no evidences in this office of such disturbances, nor have any such been received since I assumed this place." The Lynchburg News declares that Mr. Pierponts utterance as to the existence of Southern outrages constitutes a reflection upon Mr. Williams, who preceded him in office, which the country will well appreciate. This time a year ago, the telegraph wires, says the News, were loaded with fabrications of disturbances here, there, and out-breaks in the other place, all intended for political effect upon North Carolina, Ohio, the Keystone State, Maine and Kentucky, where elections were impending. The independent Press correspondent through the South men of training, integrity and diligence, and they thoroughly reported upon the situation there. They held conversations with all classes. The testimony was concurrent to the effect that all that the South needed was to be let alone; her people were able to take care of themselves. The races were only antagonistic to one another when Northern adventurers and native "loyalists" were concerned in creating disturbances, and even they could not create them, but were fertile in inventing them. The press testimony effectually spoiled the game of the "Department of Justice." A pretext for controlling elections by force could not be formed. The first pretense of any fair election since the war was held. Every Southern State, except Mississippi and South Carolina, went Conservative. The result in every State going Conservative was secured, except in Louisiana, and with the violence and the oppression and the final compromise in that State, the country is familiar.

Since that time, every one of the accusations of Ku-Klux disturbances has fallen through. Every accuser beginning with Williams, has been retiring in disgrace. The Supreme Court has decided the force bill unconstitutional. Quietly but significantly the person convicted under that law, whose terms will extend beyond next October, have been pardoned. When the Supreme Court meets in October, a decision nullifying the Force bill will be handed down by the Judges.

Meantime, the dispatch of Mr. Pierpont, from which the above reply is taken, is construed as intended to prepare the country for the final collapse of the arbitrary policy of the "Department of Justice." There are $9,000,000 in the Treasury set aside for the uses of that Department. The terms of this provision are that "It shall be used for the purpose of promoting justice." No larger or smaller detail is mentioned. It was intended for political expenditure. Mr. Pierpont lets it be known he will use none of it. On the contrary he is calling the marshals to account who have been the custodians of this corruption fund. The Arkansas Marshal, the Louisiana Marshal, the North Carolina Marshal, and others of like kidney, find themselves impoverished and held to strict account. The South is prospering. Unprecedented crops have been raised. Southern securities are strengthening and the scars made by the war and injuries inflicted by reconstruction are healing. Carpet-baggers and scallawags, "depart in peace."

Excitement and Short Life.
The deadliest foe to man's longevity is an unnatural and unreasonable excitement. Every man is born with a certain stock of vitality which cannot be increased, but which may be expended or husbanded, as he deems best. Within certain limits he has his choice, to move fast or slow, to live abstemiously or intensely, to draw his little amount of life over a large space, or condense it into a narrow one; but when his stock is exhausted he has no more. He who lives abstemiously who avoids all stimulants, takes light exercise, never overtasks himself, indulges no exhausting passions, feeds his mind and heart on no exciting material, has no "abstinent pleasure, lets nothing ruffle his temper, keeps his "accounts with God and man duly squared up," is sure, barring accidents, to spin out his life to the longest limit which it is possible to attain; while he who intensely feeds on high seasoned food, whether material or mental, fatigues his body or brain by hard labor; exposes himself to inflammatory disease, seeks continual excitement, gives loose rein to his passion, frets at every trouble, and enjoys little repose, is burning the candle at both ends, and is sure to shorten his days.

A Lively Incident of Travel in the South.

A gentleman residing in this city had occasion, a few days since, to take a journey down the river and several miles back from it, using a saddle-horse. Darkness overtook him in a sparsely-settled district, and as the roads were in a bad condition and the evening looked threatening, he halted before a forlorn-looking hut and asked if he could find lodging.

"I reckon ye mought," replied the long-haired, sorrowful-eyed squatter, after hesitating a moment.

The Vicksburger found little to eat, and his horse found little to drink, and they both were alone, and they had but a few words for the stranger, and scarcely spoke to each other. When the evening grew old, the traveler camped down on the floor on a blanket, and being very tired, he fell asleep, while host and hostess were smoking their black clay pipes at the other end of the room. He had slept about two hours, when the squatter shook him by the shoulder and said—

"Stranger, I'm powerful sorry to disturb ye, but I want to ax a favor."

"Yes—yes—what is it?" inquired the Vicksburger, as he rubbed his eyes and sat up.

"Ye like to see fair play, don't ye, stranger?"

"Yes, of course."

"Well, me'n the old woman can't agree; some-how, she's cross and tetchy, and I guess I'm a trifle ugly. Leastwise, we don't hug up worth old boots. We've fit and fit, I'm old, and she's chuck full of grit, and it's about an even thing."

"Well, I'm sorry," but in the Vicksburger, as the squatter hesitated.

"We've been a-talkin' since ye come, stranger, and we've made up to ask ye hold the candle and to let us go in for an old rouser of a fight—a regular sockdologer—which shall settle our fuss. If I lick, she'll go; if she licks, I'll travel."

"I'm sorry if there's any trouble, and hope ye won't fight."

"We've got to do it, stranger," replied the woman. "I won't live with a man who kin lick me, and he's just as high-born. Sam's as good as the run o' men but he's lazy and sassy and he wants to wear his hat on his ear!"

"She's right, stranger," said the squatter, "and this cabin can't hold both of us any longer. It's to be a squatter fight—no kicking or clubbing, and we won't go back on yer decision."

The Vicksburger protested, but the woman placed a lighted candle in his hand and posted him in the door, and the man and wife stepped out on the ground.

The Old Flint-Lock Rifle.

An elderly man named Beckwith residing in one of the Peninsula counties, came to this city last Thursday on business. He brought with him an old-fashioned. On the cars he fell in conversation with three gentlemen from this city, when one of them, to test the reality of some of the extraordinary feats of marksmanship he boasted of, offered him $10 to repeat some of them, to which the other two added $5 between them. The trial came off in an old field half a mile below Rocketts, and was witnessed by a dozen persons.

The old flint lock was fired seven times, and only once missed its aim. The old gentleman after making two shots at small objects to one side, to get his hand steady, as he said, handed his son a potato and stationed him at fifty yards distance, holding the potato between his thumb and forefinger. The rifle cracked, and the potato fell cloven in three or four pieces. One of the larger pieces was then thrown in the air, the marksman keeping at the same distance, and again the rifle shot told. An inch and a half auger was then produced, and a hole bored in the fence, behind which was fastened a piece of white paper. At the distance of sixty yards the marksman sent a ball clear through the aperture, piercing the paper. At the fourth shot from 60 yards distance, the bowl of a pipe, which the son was smoking, was crushed. At the fifth shot a copper cent was thrown in the air and hit. The sixth and seventh shots were delivered at a blackened five-cent nickel piece thrown up by the son, standing about thirty yards off. At the first attempt the shot missed. The old gentleman showed considerable mortification and laid the blame upon a bystander, who at the critical moment sneezed loudly. The next attempt, however, was an entire success. The old man declined any further trials of his skill, and when offered a sum of money to repeat his first feat of shooting a potato from his son's hand, he refused, saying he didn't care to try such experiments unless his weapon was freshly cleaned: The exhibition was the more remarkable from the fact that the marksman was an old man, at least fifty. His eye, however, is a clear, bright gray.
